Any person who lives and/or works in Cambridge is invited to join the Cambridge Review Committee Community Sub-committee and share their observations about what it is like to live and work in the unique community that is Cambridge.

Questions to be considered from participants

- What is it like to live and/or work in the unique community that is Cambridge?
- What are the most constructive ways to enhance relationships in the community and among governmental entities?
- In addition to the issues that the Committee is already reviewing, what else should they consider? (In their opening remarks, the Committee will inform participants about their work to date and their areas of exploration.)

The Cambridge Review Committee was created in the wake of the July 16th 2009 arrest of Professor Henry Louis Gates, Jr. The Committee members that come from Cambridge and across the United States have diverse professional backgrounds and bring years of experience in their respective fields from law enforcement, academia, behavioral sciences, diversity, community relations and conflict resolution. The Committee has been charged with identifying “lessons learned” for the city, the police department and the nation; helping the City of Cambridge as a community engage in a meaningful dialogue which brings its neighborhoods closer together and breaks down communication barriers; and identifying opportunities for the city as a whole to learn and grow from this experience and serve as a national model of how to respond to a community incident.
